ENTREPRENEURIAL IDEAS AND SOURCES

- ◎ Business ideas are thoughts that when implemented can lead to income generalization.
 - ◎ Entrepreneurs must first produce ideas from different sources that should lead them to starting a well-planned business.

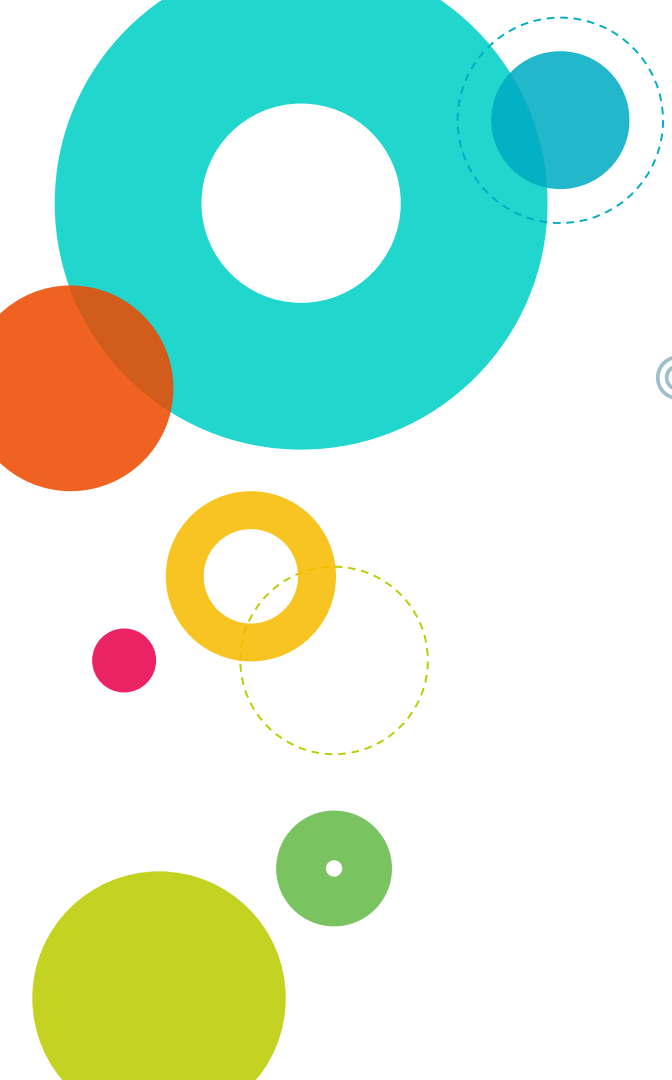

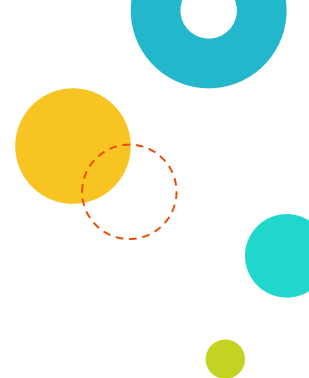

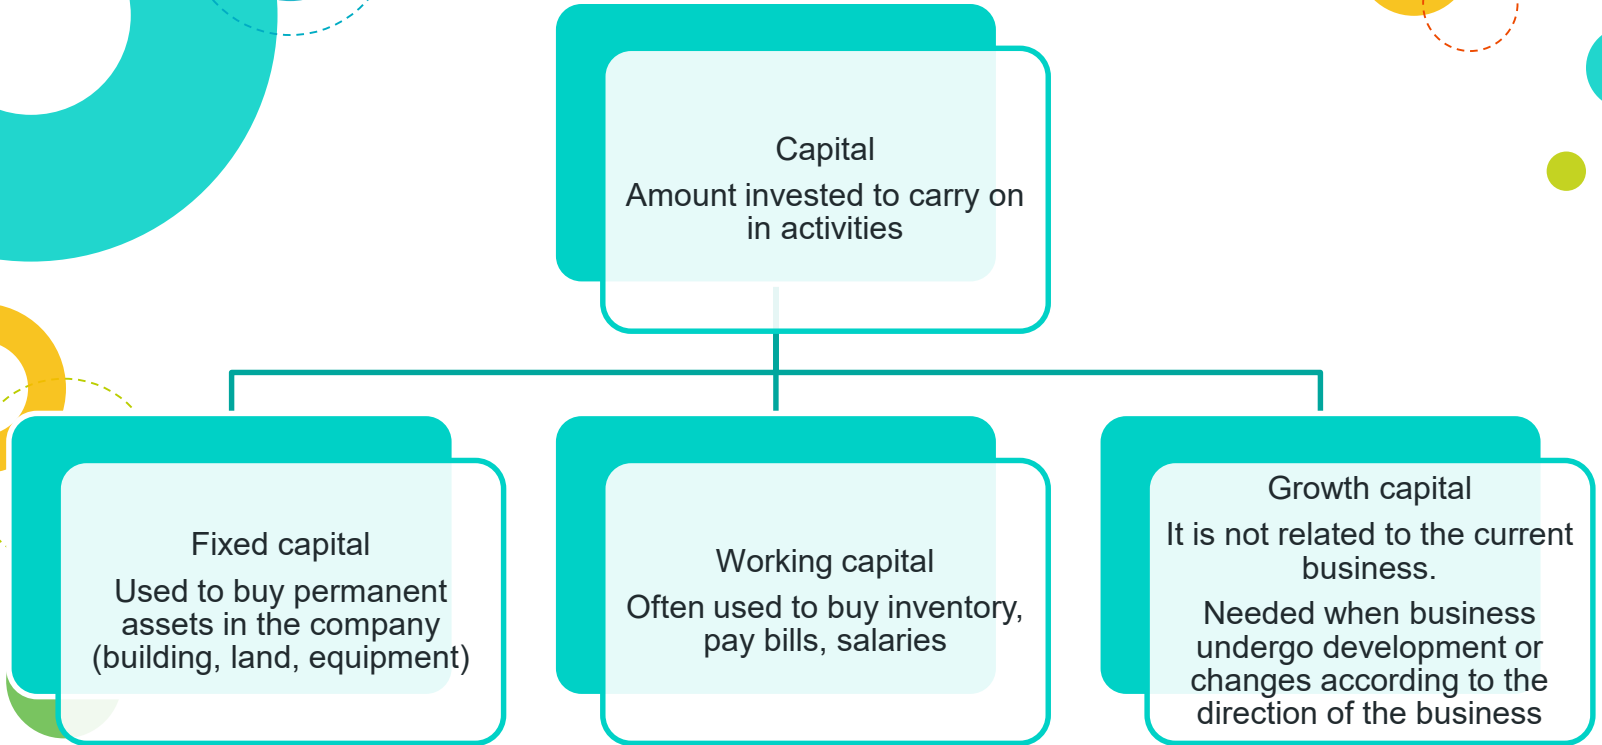

PRIMARY SOURCES

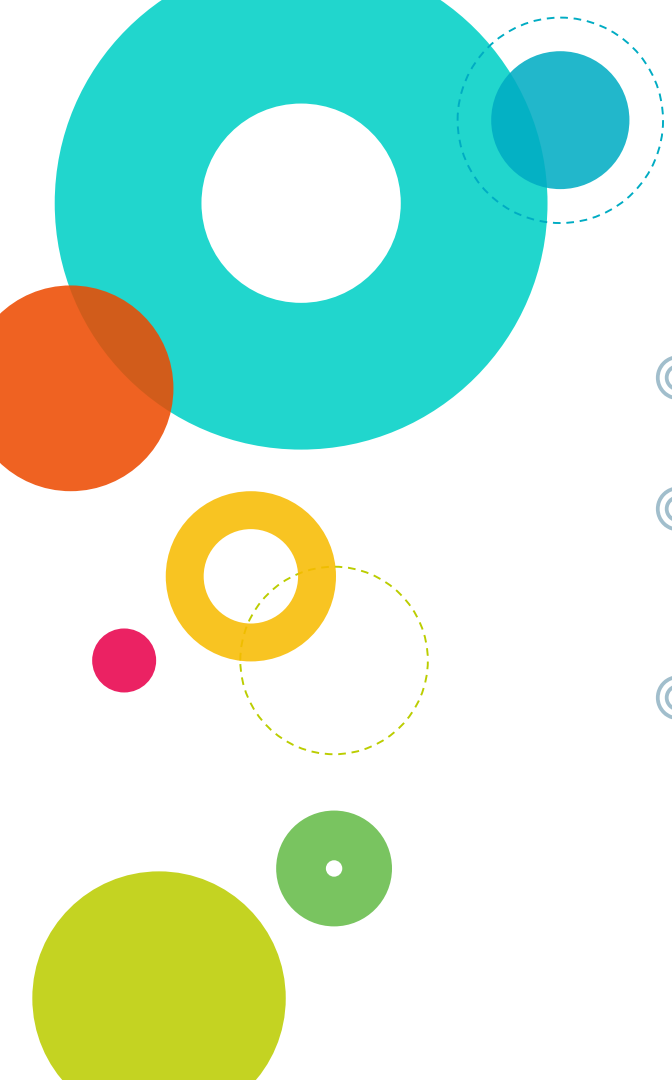

- ◎ Experience.
 - ◎ An idea can also be generated from experience.
 - ◎ Experience comes from constant touch on a particular aspect.
 - ◎ For instance, an individual might have an experience in accounting through his or her occasional involvement with accounting issues.

- ◎ Knowledge and skills
 - ◎ Business ideas can be acquired through training individuals where they are equipped with necessary skills and knowledge from schools and such other institutions of training.

- ◎ Capital and interest
 - ◎ The ability of entrepreneurs to determine the amount of capital a business where it can do.
 - ◎ In other word businesses need to be opened in accordance with existing financial capability.
 - ◎ Thus, capital is the basic things to consider before pursuing the idea of opening a business

© Capital

- ◎ Hobbies are what one is fond of doing most of his or her time.
 - ◎ At least each one finds something interesting and comfortable doing every time.
 - ◎ Well, that might be a source of a business idea

SECONDARY SOURCES

- Community's response
 - A business idea can also be generated through listening from other people's thoughts.
 - This is more so important when you socialize with great minds or such people who have tried out businesses or those who are in businesses.

- ◎ Any kind of business, MUST complies with the community values and norms, especially the local community.
 - ◎ Example, poultry farm near residential area

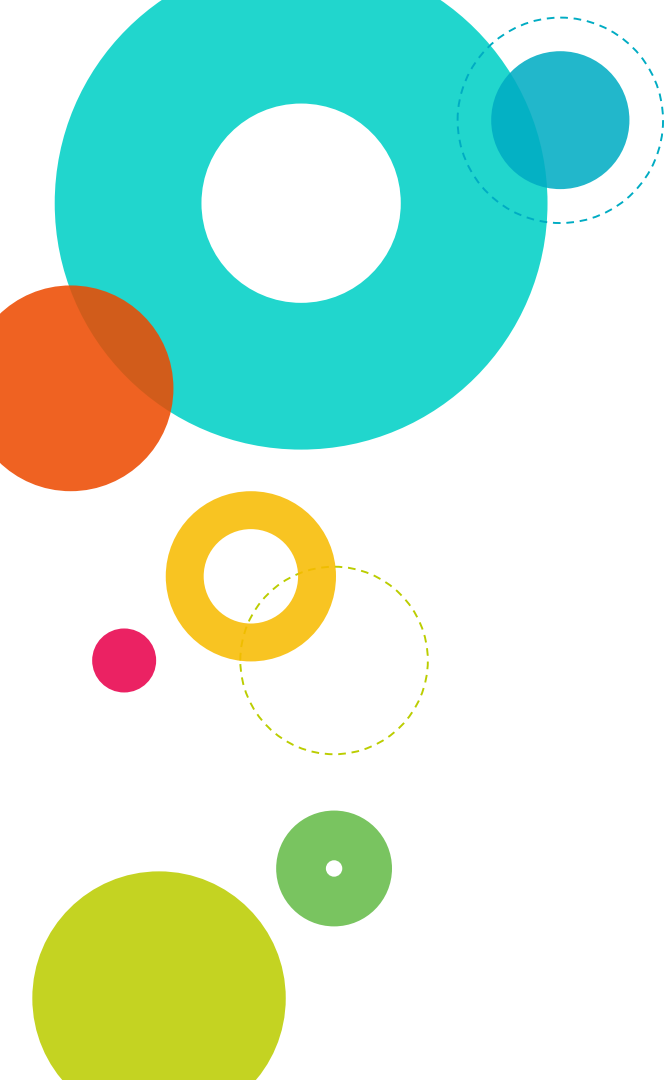

◎ Legislation aspect

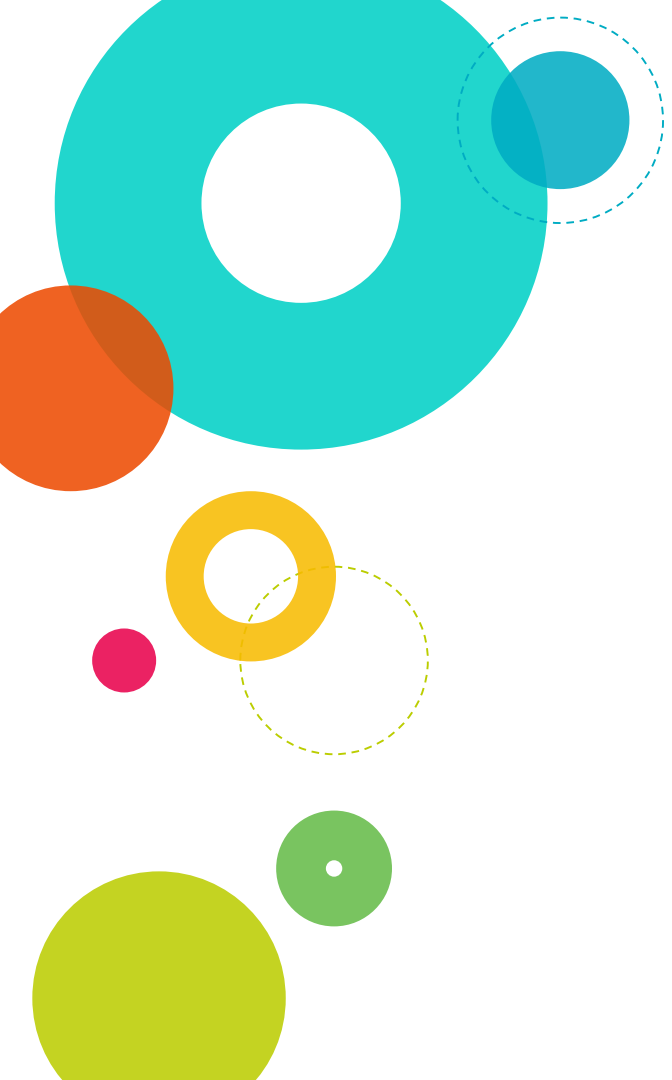

- ◎ Legislation refers to laws, rules, and government policies that regulate how businesses operate.
- ◎ Entrepreneurs can use these as secondary sources to identify gaps or needs in the market—especially when new laws are introduced or old ones are amended.

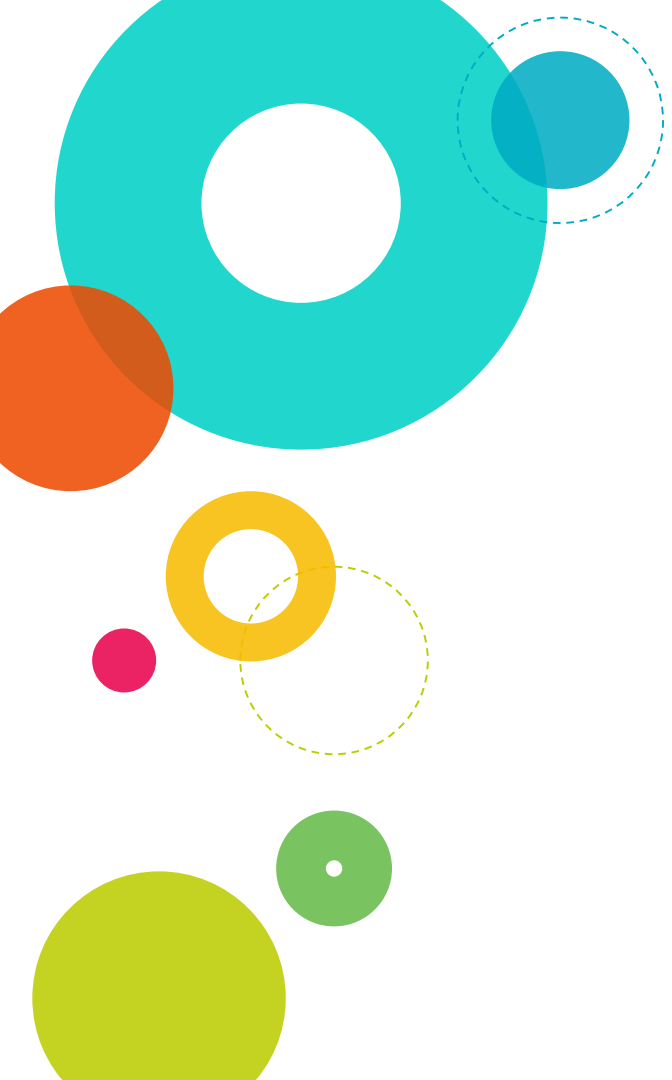

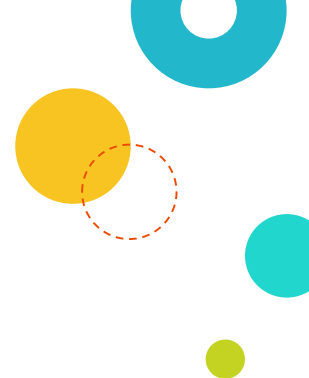

- Why legislation matters for cyberpreneurs:

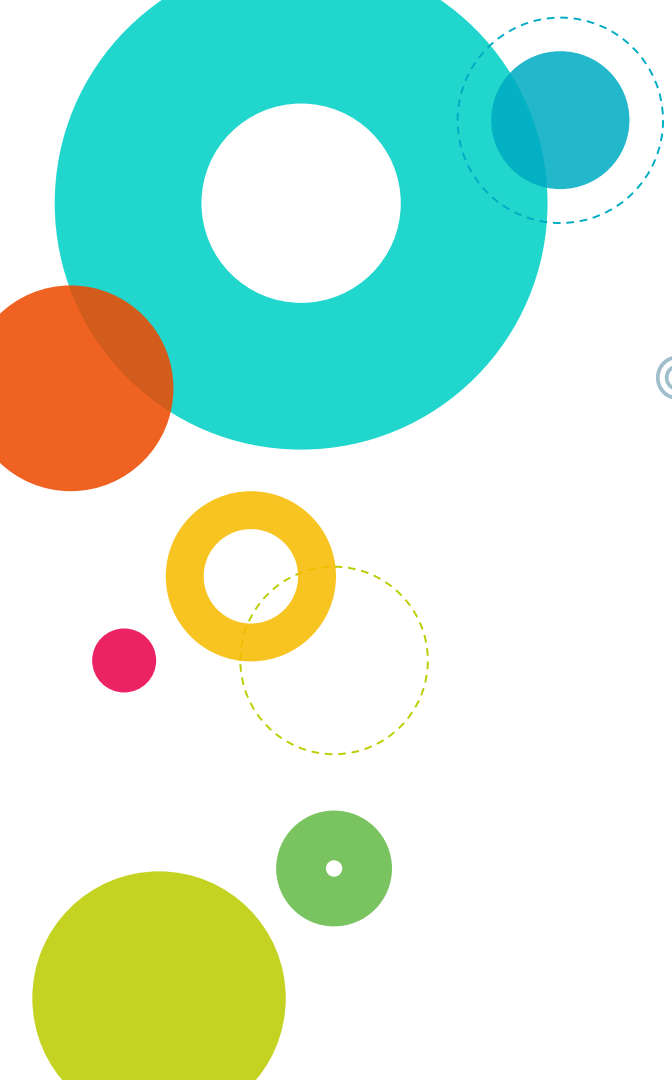

- Creates New Needs:

- New laws often require individuals or businesses to change their behavior or adopt new practices.
- Entrepreneurs can step in to provide products or services that help meet those legal requirements.

- Eliminates Old Practices:
 - Banned products or processes open room for alternatives.
 - Example: Ban on single-use plastics → Opportunity for paper straws or reusable containers.

- Government Incentives:
 - Tax breaks, grants, or subsidies often encourage investment in specific sectors.
 - Example: Incentives for electric vehicles → Growth of EV charging station providers.

- Compliance Services:
 - When laws get more complex, businesses need help to stay compliant.
 - Entrepreneurs can offer services like training, consultancy, or compliance software.

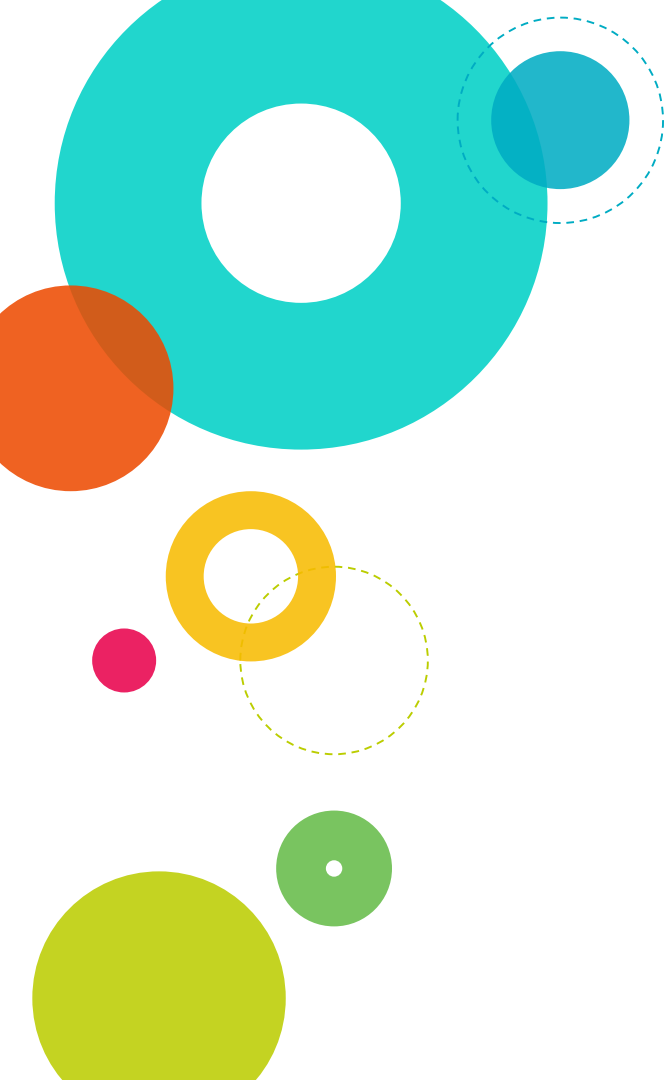

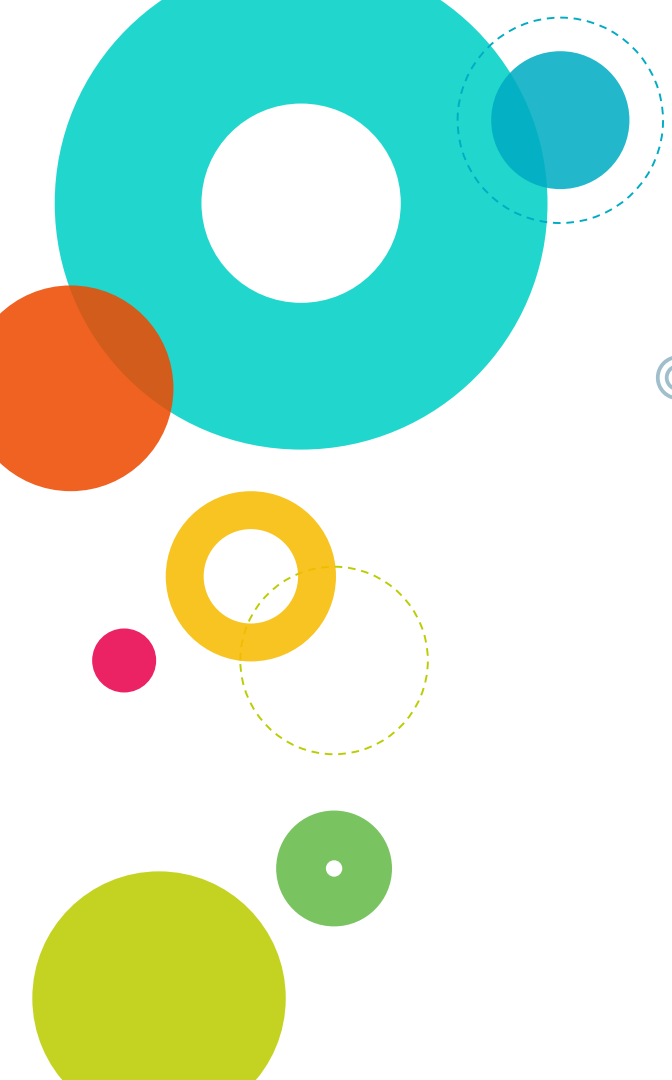

◎ Competitors

- ◎ Competitors are a valuable secondary source for generating business ideas.
- ◎ Observing what other businesses in the same or similar industries are doing can inspire improvements, innovations, or entirely new ventures.

- ◎ How Competitors Inspire Ideas:
 - Identify gaps or weaknesses:
 - Study customer complaints or low ratings of competitors.
 - Offer a better product, improved service, or faster delivery.

- Benchmarking:
 - Learn best practices from successful competitors.
 - Adapt and refine these practices for your own market.
 - Product differentiation:
 - Look at features competitors offer and think how to stand out—maybe through design, pricing, or added value.

- Market opportunities:
 - Competitors may overlook certain customer segments.
 - Target niche markets they ignore.

◎ Risk

- ◎ In cyberpreneurship, risk can serve as a secondary source of ideas when entrepreneurs identify common risks faced by individuals or businesses and develop solutions to reduce or manage those risks.

- ◎ How risk generates business ideas:
 - Identify common risks:
 - Examples: cybersecurity threats, natural disasters, health issues, data loss.
 - Entrepreneurs can create products or services that provide protection or prevention.

- ◎ Develop risk -based solutions:
 - Automatic cloud data backup systems.
 - Digital insurance products.
 - Home safety or surveillance devices.

- ◎ Opportunities in uncertainty:
 - During economic instability, there's demand for cost saving products or flexible work solutions.

3. Tolerance for failure

- ◎ Cyberpreneurship are not easily frustrated, desperate and sad when experiencing failure. They learn from failure then success.

4. More Energy (High Level of Energy)

- ◎ Cyberpreneurship are more eager to allow them to bear the burden and pressure they will face.

5. They make it all about the customer
- ◎ Customers are why a business exists.
 - ◎ Their sales dollars determine the success of any business.
 - ◎ Successful cyberpreneurs realize this early on and make their business about the customers.

6. They make the big decisions carefully
- ◎ Every decision has consequences, whether good or bad.
 - ◎ Over time, those consequences shape our reality and tell the story of our lives.
 - ◎ Cyberpreneurs who are doing well take note and carefully identify the potential long-term effects of each decision, while seeking counsel before making major decision.

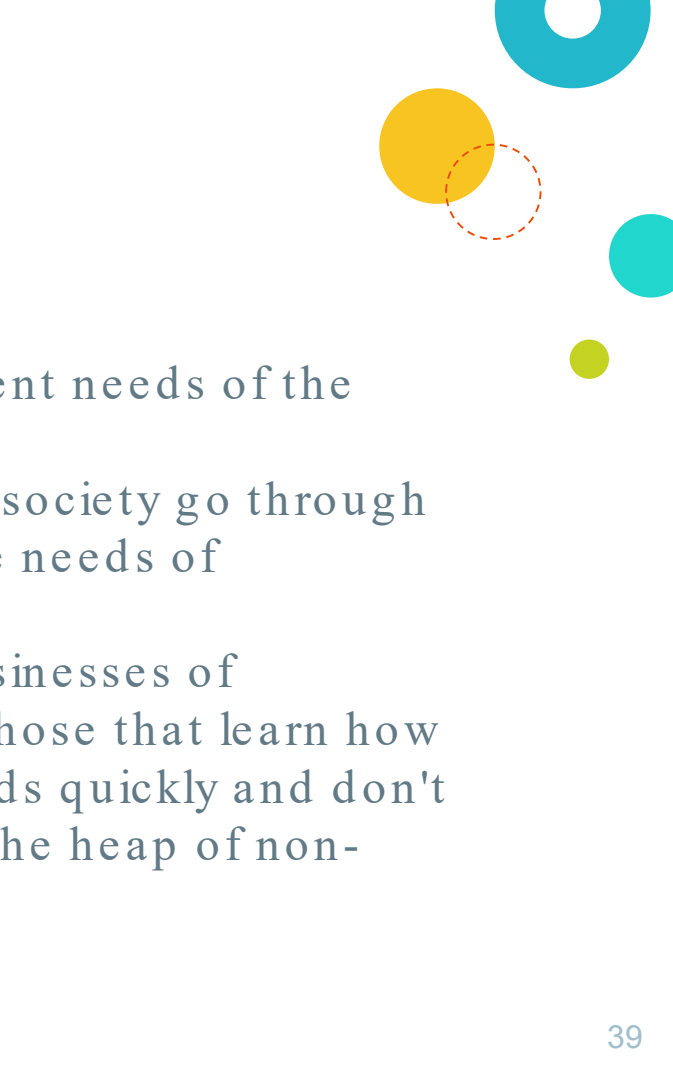

7. They harness technology.

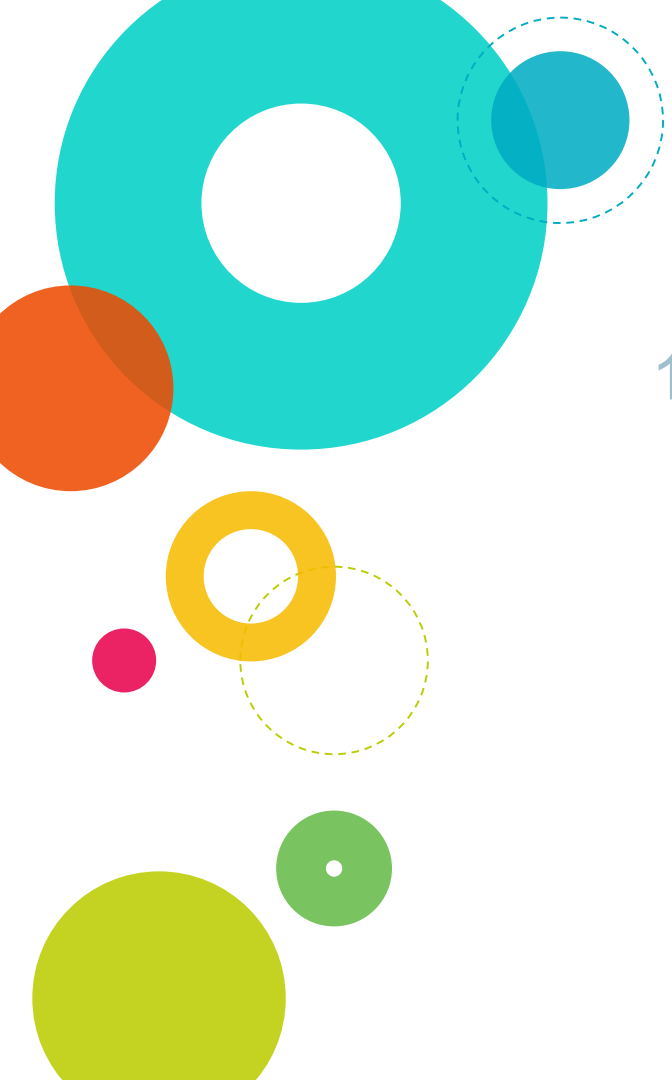

- ◎ Things change constantly, and they change especially quickly in business.
- ◎ To best serve their customers, successful cyberpreneurs keep up to date with the best technology can offer to them.
- ◎ Take, for example, live chat. It can make a huge difference in your company's customer service results and overall growth.

8. They are constantly learning

- ⦿ There's always something you don't know and something else that has just been discovered.
- ⦿ For example, you can't build a business around something you don't know about, and you can't improve products and services using outdated methods.
- ⦿ Cyberpreneurs are always on the prowl to learn more about what they do and what the competition is working on.

9. They adapt to the current needs of the customer and market
- ⦿ As conditions and society go through changes, so do the needs of customers.
 - ⦿ The successful businesses of tomorrow will be those that learn how to meet those needs quickly and don't get left behind in the heap of non-adapters.

10. Teamwork

- ◎ Successful cyberpreneurs often have a standard (quality) is high, eager to help the company grow and develop.

1.1.5

THE IMPORTANCE OF CYBERPRENEURSHIP

- ◎ Economic Growth and Job Creation

- ◎ Stimulates innovation:

Cyberpreneurship drives innovation by encouraging individuals to develop new business models, products, and services that are uniquely suited for the digital age. This leads to the creation of new industries and economic sectors.

- Creates jobs: By starting new online businesses, cyberpreneurs directly contribute to job creation. They hire people for various roles, including digital marketing, content creation, web development, and customer service. Additionally, the growth of a cyberpreneurial ecosystem supports a network of freelancers and other service providers.

- ◎ Accessibility and flexibility

- ◎ Lower barriers to entry:

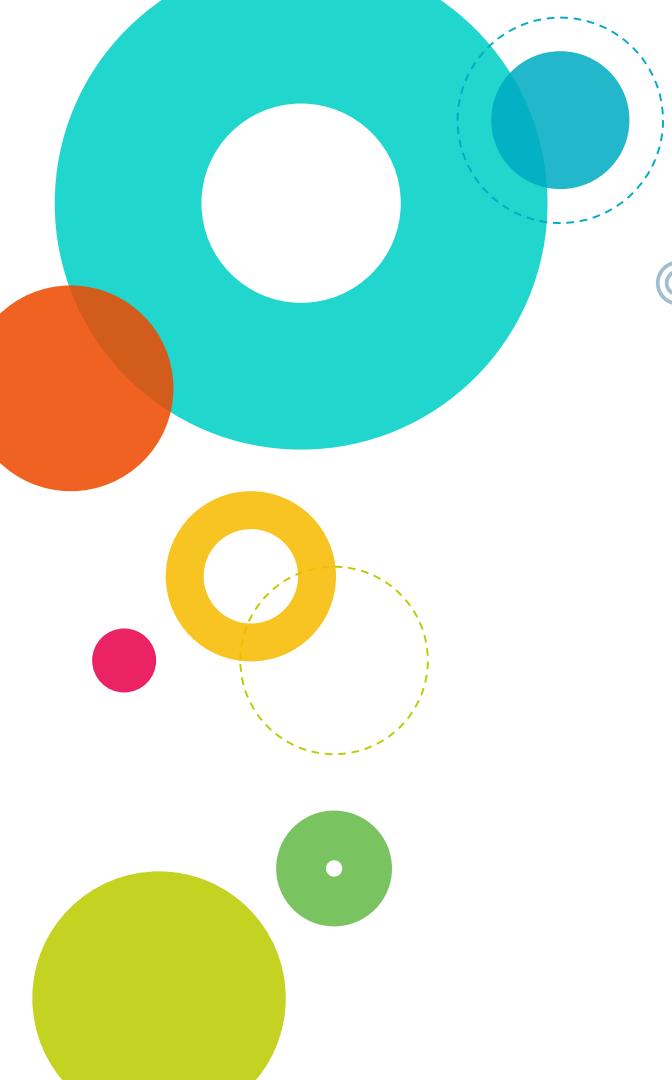

- Unlike traditional businesses that require significant capital for physical infrastructure, cyberpreneurship often has a much lower startup cost.

- ◎ A cyberpreneur only needs a domain, a website, and a professional email to get started, making it accessible to a wider range of people, including those with limited financial resources.

- ◎ Global market reach:
The internet allows cyberpreneurs to reach a global audience without the geographical limitations of a physical store. This opens up vast new markets and opportunities for growth.

◎ Flexible operations:

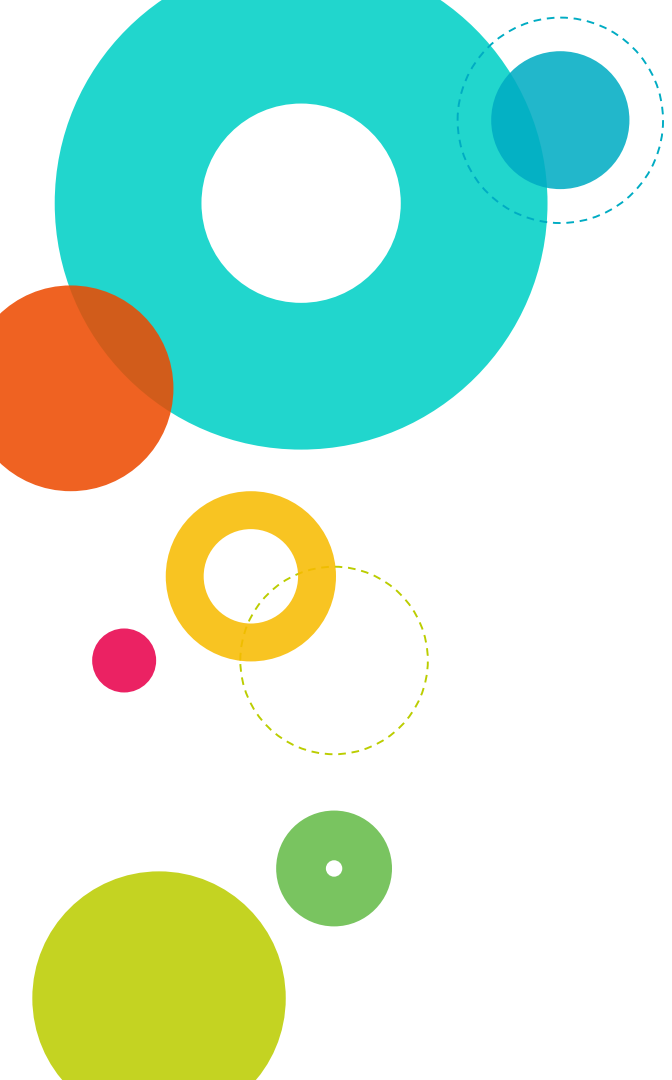

Online businesses can operate 24/7, providing flexibility for both the business owner and their customers. Cyberpreneurs have the option to set their own hours and can often manage their operations from anywhere in the world.

On the right side, there are more circles in yellow, cyan, and lime green, some with dashed outlines.

◎ Business Efficiency and Customer Engagement

Streamlined logistics: The internet and digital tools have made business logistics more efficient.

Cyberpreneurs can use various online platforms and apps for inventory tracking, order management, and real-time customer support.

- Effective customer engagement: Digital platforms provide multiple avenues for businesses to interact with their customers, such as through social media, email, and blogs. This direct and efficient communication helps build stronger customer relationships and trust.

- Scalability: Online business models are often more easily scalable than traditional ones. Cyberpreneurs can expand their operations and reach a larger customer base without the need for a corresponding increase in physical space or staff.
